THE GLASS WORKERS.

Proposed Amalgamation of Various Unions of the Trade.

An organization which will have control of all workers in the glass trade, whether in the window, flint or bottle department, is the ambitious scheme that some of the prominent union men have in view. This idea has been advanced before and has never met with any very striking success, but it is claimed that the time is now ripe, or nearly so, for its consummation.

At present there are three organizations which control all the workers in the glass trade—the American Flint Glass Workers' union, the Glass Bottle Blowers' association and the Amalgamated Window Glass Workers' association. For years there has been an annoying trade jurisdictional dispute between the flint glass workers and the bottle blowers, and inability to settle this after several conferences has led to the launching of the plan to amalgamate and induce the window workers to enter the new association also.

The disagreement which has been a source of worry to members of both bodies arose over the control of workers employed in the making of fruit jars. These are manufactured in both flint and bottle plants, and each organization has claimed the exclusive jurisdiction over these particular workers. Endless discussion has resulted, and in many localities considerable enmity has been aroused between the bottle and flint workers. It has also resulted in the Flint Glass Workers' union leaving the American Federation of Labor, and, while an application was recently made for readmission, it was only on the understanding that the bottle blowers make certain concessions.

A conference between representatives of the two bodies was held recently, and it was thought that an agreement might be reached and the difficulty settled, but neither side was willing to concede anything, and the matter remains in the same position as before. It is the general opinion among the advanced thinkers that this dispute must be settled, and in amalgamation they believe they see the only solution.

While no definite plans have been evolved upon which the new organization would be conducted if formed, it is said that the national executive board would include a general president and a vice president from each branch. The vice president would practically be in charge of the affairs of the department from whence he came, and the president's power would only be invoked where matters of interest to the organization in general arose. It has been figured out that the affairs of the United Glass Workers could be conducted much more economically under the new arrangement than on the present basis.

It is a peculiar fact that where there is a glass factory making any one particular kind of glass there is usually one and sometimes more turning out another kind. The centralization of the power of the three present organizations into one will, it is contended, do away with the immense expense of several different executive officers visiting the same locality to adjust disputes, as the work could be done by the one man under the advice of the vice president of each department. If the new association is formed it will embrace from 25,000 to 30,000 men in its ranks and will be one of the most powerful labor organizations in the country.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

A Labor Union Mayor.

Mark Jardine, who recently took his seat as mayor of the city of Rockford, Ill., is a member of the Leather Workers' union and past president of the national organization. He won in a three cornered contest, defeating the Republican and the Democratic candidates, and is recognized by the 40,000 inhabitants of Rockford as a straight out "labor" mayor.

The local press says that Mr. Jardine was elected by a combination of the solid labor vote with a liberal percentage of the temperance and church vote of the city.

Initiative and Referendum.

New Jersey is the second of the eastern states to terminate machine rule in municipal affairs. Governor Stokes has signed a bill establishing the initiative and referendum in the cities, boroughs, villages and towns of New Jersey.

The law is thoroughly up to date, having been drawn by Hon. Herman B. Walker of the New Jersey people's lobby. Henceforth the final power in municipal affairs in New Jersey will be in the voters. Machine rule is a thing of the past.

Seneca on Insults.

Does this injury befall me deservedly or undeservedly? If deservedly, it is not an insult, but a judicial sentence; if undeservedly, then he who does injustice ought to blush, not I. And what is this which he called an insult? Some one has made a joke about the baldness of my head, the weakness of my eyes, the thinness of my legs, the whiteness of my stature. What insult is there in telling me that which every one sees?

A Bad Scheme.

Mrs. Scraggs—And why did your new girl leave? Mr. Blinns—I paid her in advance. Mrs. Scraggs—I shouldn't think she would object to that. Mr. Blinns—She didn't. It pleased her so she couldn't work.

A financial genius is a man who can have a family full of money at the same time.—New York Press.

SOME BIG BITES.

They Show the Power of the Jaws of the Crocodile.

The power of the jaws of the crocodile is terrific, says Sir Samuel Baker in his book on wild beasts.

Once, he continues, he had the metal of a large hook the thickness of ordinary telegraph wire completely bent together, the barbed point being pressed tightly against the shank and rendered useless. This compression was caused by the snap of the jaws when seizing a live duck which he had used as a bait, the hook being fastened beneath one wing. On one occasion he found a fish weighing seventy pounds bitten clean through as if divided by a knife. This, again, was the work of the snap of the jaws of a crocodile.

A Frenchman, M. Paul Bert, once made experiments on the strength of a crocodile's jaws by means of a dynamometer. He found that a crocodile weighing 120 pounds exerted a force of 308 pounds in closing his jaws. The lion has an enormous jaw power. On one occasion an African traveler pushed the butt end of his gun into a lion's mouth, and the pressure of the jaws cracked it as though it had been struck by a steam hammer.

Eclipses.

Solar eclipses were noted by the Egyptians as far back as 661 B. C. The first eclipse recorded in history was of the moon by Ptolemy, who gives it as taking place March 19, 721 B. C.

Thanksgiving.

The Thanksgiving proclamation was originated by Sir Francis Bernard, captain general and governor in chief in and over his majesty's province of Massachusetts Bay. It was issued Nov. 4, 1707, and the form then used has been substantially adhered to ever since.

While radical changes in styles do not appeal to him, he insists upon all the little variations that each season introduces. This is the store for these conservative and refined dressers. Our eyes are always focused on the new features as fast as they come out.
